Off for the Holy Land

Apostle Francis Marion Lyman's 1902 Tour of the Middle East

As Told by His Traveling Companion Sylvester Q. Cannon

PROVO, UTAH—Apostle Francis M. Lyman's 1902 pilgrimage to the Holy Land comes into vivid focus in a new book, Off for the Holy Land, which draws on previously unpublished personal writings of his traveling companion and personal secretary, Sylvester Q. Cannon.

The new volume presents a richly contextualized and carefully curated account of their three-month expedition to the Holy Land and Ottoman Empire. Drawing from Cannon's vivid personal journals and the nine travelogues published in the Millennial Star, editor Reid L. Neilson constructs a compelling documentary history that opens a window into early twentieth-century Latter-day Saint missionary work, travel, and interfaith encounters in the Middle East.

Off for the Holy Land is framed by two introductory essays: Reid L. Neilson's offering historical background on the travelers and the motivations for their tour, and a second—by historian James R. Swensen—featuring a stunning photographic essay. Swensen brings to light Cannon's personal photo album, pairing rare images with selected excerpts from letters and diaries, offering a visually immersive experience of sacred and storied landscapes. The book's endsheets include a beautiful, full-color map of the adventure.

From the shores of the Mediterranean to the streets of Jerusalem, Off for the Holy Land invites readers to retrace a journey of faith, diplomacy, and devotion—one that deepened these men's testimonies of Jesus Christ and broadened the Church's international vision at the dawn of a new century.
