ABOUT THE EDITORS

KENNETH L. ALFORD, PhD, is a professor of Church history and doctrine at Brigham Young University. After serving almost thirty years on active duty in the United States Army, he retired as a colonel in 2008. Ken served in numerous military assignments, including the Pentagon, eight years teaching computer science at the United States Military Academy at West Point, and four years as department chair and professor teaching strategic leadership at the National Defense University in Washington, DC.

JARED M. HALVERSON, PhD, is an associate professor of ancient scripture at Brigham Young University, joining the faculty after twenty-four years as a teacher and administrator in Seminaries and Institutes of Religion. He earned his PhD in American religious history from Vanderbilt University, specializing in secularization, faith loss, and antireligious rhetoric. He is the host of the Unshaken podcast and frequently works with people around the world experiencing faith crisis.

ROBBIE TAGGART, PhD, is an associate professor in ancient scripture at Brigham Young University. He delights in the radiant existence God has gifted him. He believes that all people are inherently holy as children of divine heavenly parents. Before coming to BYU, he taught in Seminaries and Institutes for seventeen years. He received his BA in English literature, an MA in comparative studies with an emphasis in comparative religious literature, and a PhD in theological leadership.

NEW TESTAMENT Insights

Following Jesus Christ

“Jesus Christ invited us to follow him. Nothing could be so simple and yet so difficult. This book comes to the rescue.”

—Brad Wilcox, professor of ancient scripture, Brigham Young University

PROVO, UTAH—At its heart, discipleship is an invitation to become like Jesus Christ. In the New Testament, the Savior’s call is clear: “If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me” (Matthew 16:24). To follow him is to emulate his life—to act with love, humility, and compassion and to replace self-interest with devoted service. Discipleship is more than belief. It is a way of life.

New Testament Insights invites readers to explore what it truly means to follow Christ. Through thoughtful, perceptive essays, this volume models how careful study of the New Testament can yield powerful personal application. Familiar passages take on new depth as contributors illuminate the doctrines, patterns, and lived realities of Christian discipleship.

These essays are designed to strengthen faith, deepen love for the Savior, and inspire a more committed walk along the covenant path, helping readers experience the joy that comes from becoming more like Jesus Christ.

For Latter-day Saints, discipleship lies at the very center of faith—a lifelong commitment to follow Jesus Christ in every aspect of life. It shapes how we serve, how we grow, and how we prepare for eternal life.

In New Testament Insights, respected scholars and devoted students of scripture explore the principles of discipleship found throughout the New Testament. Organized into five sections, this anthology offers a rich and practical look at what it means to follow the Savior:
