

The Battle of Gettysburg was fought in and around the small town of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, July 1–3, 1863, during which there were approximately 50,000 casualties. This “Plan of the Gettysburg Battle Ground” was drawn by Charles Wellington Reed in 1864. (Library of Congress)

APPENDIX F

SPECIAL INTEREST CIVIL WAR VETERANS

This appendix lists individuals who are interesting in their own right and who should be recognized but whose Civil War service did not qualify them, for various reasons, for inclusion in appendix E. For example, teamsters and women could not qualify for Appendix E because they were not given Civil War veteran status. Other individuals could not be included because their Latter-day Saint baptismal status is uncertain or because they were not baptized as Latter-day Saints during their lifetime. (Appendix C contains information regarding how this list was researched and created. Appendix D provides explanatory information for each field in the record below as well as an explanation for the various codes and acronyms used.)

Notes: “As a young girl she served as a nurse during the Civil War. She was the first president of the National Woman’s Suffrage Association in Utah. She visited Palestine and published a volume entitled, ‘The Holy Land,’ in 1912 on her observations there” (Improvement Era, April 1923, 584). A poet and author, she wrote dozens of articles and poems that appeared in the Improvement Era between 1900 and 1921 (for example: “Thou Shalt Have No Other Gods Before Me,” Improvement Era, October 1900, 919–26, and “The First Handcart Company,” Improvement Era, July 1909, 720–23. “In the North, more than 3,000 women worked as paid army nurses, and 2,000 others worked as volunteers or as affiliates of the Sanitary Commission” (Lesli J. Favor, Women Doctors and Nurses of the Civil War [New York: Rosen, 2004], 7). Army nurses “went forth on the perilous path of real service in the war. They were sunshine at the edge of battlefields, voices of solace in hospital sufferings. In ways beyond the power of the chaplains they served the dying, receiving last messages and brightening the last hours of many a boy in blue. The privations and dangers which these noble characters endured called for a fortitude

equal in many respects to the valor of the soldier. The army nurse was obliged to respond to duty at all times and in all emergencies. She could not measure her time, sleep, or strength. She was under orders to serve to the fullest. . . . They were willing to dare everything for the sake of union and liberty” (Rev. Edward A. Horton, preface to Our Army Nurses, by Mary A. Gardner Holland [Boston: R. Wilkins, 1895], 5–6).

Death Date: 17 December 1891	Death Place: Salt Lake City, Salt Lake, Utah Find A Grave: 5893995 Burial Location: Fort Douglas Cemetery, Salt Lake City, Utah
Notes: An Irishman reportedly born on St. Patrick's Day, he enlisted in the U.S. Army on November 28, 1839, and served in the Seminole War at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and in Iowa. After being honorably discharged in November 1844, he enlisted in the Texas Volunteers. Promoted to captain, he fought and was wounded during the Mexican War. Honorably discharged from the army on May 24, 1847, he traveled to California in 1850 and in 1853 was appointed as a lieutenant in the California State Rangers. At the beginning of the Civil War, Connor commanded a unit of the California Militia known as the "Stockton Blues" that was soon redesignated as the Third Regiment California Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was ordered to Utah Territory to protect the Overland Trail from potential Indian and Mormon uprisings. Connor was the senior military officer in Utah throughout most of the Civil War. He commanded the District of Utah, Department of the Pacific, from August 6, 1862, until March 1865, when his district was merged into the District of the Plains (which he was chosen to command). He was often outspoken regarding his distrust of Brigham Young and Mormons. He returned to Utah after the Civil War and was actively involved in mining and politics until his death. See Brigham D. Madsen, Glory Hunter: A Biography of Patrick Edward Connor (Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1990); and E. B. Long, The Saints and the Union: Utah Territory during the Civil War (Urbana: University of Illinois Press, 1981). KANE, THOMAS LEIPER (UNION ARMY)Not LDS.

Birth Date: 27 January 1822	Birth Place: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
LDS Membership Date: Not LDS	Source(s): (NFS ID #: L78R-J8D)
Death Date: 26 December 1883	Death Place: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania Find A Grave: 5843065 Burial Location: Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Notes: He was a long-time friend of Brigham Young and the LDS Church. Prior to the Civil War, he “developed sympathy for the Mormons, perhaps because of their stand against slavery. He befriended Brigham Young, and in 1858 Kane helped prevent bloodshed by mediating the dispute between the Mormons and the federal government. At the commencement of the Civil War, Kane raised a mounted rifle regiment of western Pennsylvanians that became known as the ‘Bucktails’ . . . and became its lieutenant colonel on 21 June 1861.

On 22 August 1861, he commanded his men in a skirmish with J. E. B. Stuart at Catlett's Station, Virginia. Later in the year, while leading his men back to their base after a patrol from Dranesville, Virginia, he clashed with Confederates. . . . In the ensuing battle, Kane was wounded. . . . During the spring and summer of 1862, Kane commanded . . . in the Shenandoah Valley. On 6 June 1862 at Harrisburg, Virginia, Kane was captured. After his exchange in the late summer, he was promoted to brigadier general of volunteers and given command of the 2d Brigade, 1st Division, XII Corps of the Army of the Potomac. . . . He commanded a brigade of the same corps at Chancellorsville. Shortly, thereafter he contracted pneumonia and was sent to Baltimore, where he remained in the hospital through June 1863. In the early hours of the battle of Gettysburg, it became apparent that the Confederates had discovered one of the most important Federal ciphers. Someone had to convey this information to the commander of the Army of the Potomac, George Gordon Meade. Kane volunteered, though he had not recovered from pneumonia. Dressed in civilian clothes, he made his way through Confederate territory and even through a portion of Stuart's cavalry to Meade at Gettysburg. On 2 July he resumed command of his brigade, then occupying a position on the extreme right of the Union line—the business end of the 'fishhook.' At 3:30 a.m. on 3 July his position was attacked, and though he was still too weak to sit on a horse, Kane led his men in the repulse of the Confederates through the late morning. The following day Kane's health forced him to relinquish command, and he went to oversee the draft depot at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. . . . His health never really recovered, though, and he resigned his commission in November 1863. At the end of the war, he received a brevet promotion to major general for gallantry at Gettysburg" (David S. Heidler and Jeanne T. Heidler, eds., Encyclopedia of the American Civil War: A Political, Social, and Military History [New York: W. W. Norton, 2000], 1099).

LARSEN, THURSTON (UNION ARMY)Baptized before the war.

Rank: Teamster	Unit(s): Lot Smith Utah Cavalry Military Service Source(s): Fisher

LDS Membership Date: 12 February 1843	LDS Membership Source(s): NFS (ID #: KWV9-VFJ)
Death Date: 11 March 1907	Death Place: Parker, Fremont, Idaho Find A Grave: — Burial Location: Parker, Fremont, Idaho
Notes: [MLM] [LOT SMITH TEAMSTER] He "came to Utah with the Mormon Battalion" [PPMU, 115]. "The minimum age to be accepted into the militia was 18, Thurston was only 17, but only three months from his 18th birthday, so he requested to go. In dire need of young men that could take the rigors & hardships of such a campaign, Thurston was permitted to join the army on the 26th of June, 1846. . . . During the Civil War, there was trouble with renegades destroying telegraph wire, railroad tracks, and robbing the mail. Frank Fuller, the acting governor of Utah, called for volunteers from the Nauvoo Legion to patrol the telegraph lines and protect them from destruction. The next day, 24 men under Colonel Robert T. Burton, left for this assignment. Two days later President Abraham Lincoln, through Secretary of War Stanton, authorized Brigham Young to send a group of cavalry to serve ninety days patrolling the same telegraph lines. One hundred & six men responded to the call and Thurston Larson was one of them. The commanding officer was Captain Lot Smith." He also served in Utah's Black Hawk War (http://trees.ancestry.com/tree/20880616/person/18024378831/media/3?pgnum=1&pg=0&pgpl=pid%7cpgNum). He was "a member of the Mormon Battalion, Company C . . . resided in Nauvoo when the Prophet Joseph Smith was killed. He joined the Battalion and marched to Santa Fe with the sick detachment of the Battalion, and arrived in the Valley July 27, 1847. He took part in the Echo Canyon war and suffered all the trials incident to early days in Utah" [LDSBE 4:750–51]. [Fisher] spells his last name "Larsen"; [LDSBE] spells his last name "Larson." As they were not eligible for federal military pensions, Lot Smith teamsters were not listed on [1862 MOR].

Brought first library to Utah. . . . High priest; ward clerk . . . Belong[ed] to Y X company [Brigham Young Express and Carrying Company]; rode the pony express and drove fast express” [PPMU, 1028]. [PPMU] also reported that he was a “spy in Johnston’s army in the Black Hills,” but the actual service referred to is uncertain. Although his teamster service did not qualify him as a pension-eligible Civil War veteran, he is listed on the 1890 veteran census schedule from Piute County, Utah. The [1890 Census] lists “Private” and “Special Company” after his name. He reported three months and fourteen days of military service (from May 8 to August 22, 1862); both dates are about one week later than the period of service of the Lot Smith Utah Cavalry Company. [1890 Census] also lists “3 ribs broken from brass [unintelligible]” as a service-related disability and includes the following explanatory note: “Served in Special Co[mpany] called out by the President of the U.S.” As they were not eligible for federal military pensions, Lot Smith teamsters were not listed on [1862 MOR].

His father was excommunicated and left the Church in 1838—four years before Alexander was born. “John Whitmer was the father of four children, three sons and one daughter. One of his sons [John Oliver Whitmer] died when about ten years old and another [Alexander Peter Jefferson Whitmer] was killed in the late civil war” (Andrew Jenson, Historical Record (Salt Lake City: 1888), 7:612–13). WIGHT, LEVI LAMONI (CONFEDERATE ARMY)Uncertain if LDS.

Rank: Private	Unit(s): 8th Battalion, Texas Cavalry Military Service Source(s): Davis Bitton, ed., The Reminiscences and Civil War Letters of Levi Lamoni Wight (Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1970), FGC.

Death Date: 15 May 1918	Death Place: Texas Find A Grave: 15519237 Burial Location: Sweetwater, Nolan, Texas
Notes: He was a son of Lyman Wight (1796–1858) and a member of Zion’s Camp who was ordained as an LDS Apostle in 1841; after the death of Joseph Smith Jr., Lyman led a group of Latter-day Saints to Texas. Lyman Wight was disfellowshipped from the LDS Church in 1848 (Davis Bitton, ed., The Reminiscences and Civil War Letters of Levi Lamoni Wight [Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1970]). No baptism date was discovered for Levi; he was almost certainly affiliated with the LDS Church before his father was disfellowshipped. Wight’s diary states (original spelling preserved), “I entered my name for a Confederate army at Fort Mason, Texas, and entered the ranks of the first Texas Caval, Co C, later Co K same reg. Recd a bounty of $50 and one month’s pay, 35 dollars. At the time Confederate money was good but the next year it went down and down till it was worthless and we served out our time with out pay, more than scant clothing, and as for me my wife spun and wove the most part of our clothes and sent them to me with considerable risk of loss.” Levi fought at Fredericksburg, Virginia, and in several other battles (Bitton, Reminiscences, 23–40). According to the reminiscences of Levi’s granddaughter, Ann Wight, after the Civil War, “His income was his quarterly Confederate pension—less than twenty dollars. . . . When his pension came, it burned his pocket until he could spend it on us children. . . . We loved to hear him tell of his Civil War experiences. Robert E. Lee was his idol. He had a large picture of him on the wall of his room. There was also a picture of a reunion of his brigade, and a panel picture of ‘Lee and his Generals.’ Also hanging on his wall was a Confederate flag” (Bitton, 189–90). There is a GAR veteran marker next to his grave marker [FGC].
