A prominent sign at the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery identifies it as “our nation’s most sacred shrine.” Visitors are directed to “please conduct [them]selves with dignity and respect at all times” and to “remember these are hallowed grounds.”<sup>2</sup> While most Americans are familiar with the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, there are also memorials to the Unknown Dead of the War of 1812 and Unknown Civil War Dead. The cemetery is dotted with numerous monuments—from the USS Maine to the Rough Riders and to the space shuttle memorials of both Challenger (1987) and Columbia (2004). Less well known is the fact that hundreds of Latter-day Saints are among the honored dead at Arlington.

OVERVIEW

Located adjacent to the Pentagon and across the Potomac River from the Lincoln Memorial, Arlington is the only national cemetery that includes burials from every major conflict in our nation's history.<sup>3</sup> Arlington is the final resting place of U.S. presidents John F. Kennedy and William H. Taft; generals John J. Pershing, Philip Sheridan, Philip Kearny, Henry "Hap" Arnold, James "Jimmy" Doolittle, and Maxwell Taylor; admirals William "Bull" Halsey, Grace Hopper, and Hyman Rickover; Supreme Court justices Oliver Wendell Holmes, Thurgood Marshall, William H. Rehnquist, and Earl Warren; explorers John Wesley Powell, Richard Byrd, and Robert E. Peary; astronauts Roger Chaffee and Virgil I. Grissom, who died in the Apollo 1 fire; other revered individuals like Walter Reed, Pierre Charles L'Enfant, George Westinghouse, Joe Louis, and Abner Doubleday; and more than four hundred thousand other men, women, and children.

The story of Arlington National Cemetery began during the American Civil War. The cemetery occupies the grounds of Arlington House, the still-standing nineteenth-century mansion and eleven-hundred-acre estate owned by Confederate general Robert E. Lee and his wife, Mary Anna Custis. Four days after Fort Sumter surrendered in 1861, Virginia seceded from the Union. The following day—18 April—Lee was offered command of all Union forces. In declining the offer, Lee stated, “If I owned four millions of slaves in the South I would sacrifice them all to the Union; but how can I draw my sword upon Virginia, my native state?”<sup>4</sup> With Arlington House being situated two hundred feet above and looking down on Washington, DC, “it did not take a military genius to appreciate the strategic importance of the old plantation.”<sup>5</sup> On 24 May 1861, federal forces occupied the house and grounds at Arlington, just a few days after Mary Anna Lee had left.

A federal statute enacted in June 1862 authorized federal tax commissioners to assess and collect taxes on Confederate-owned property.

The law required owners to pay the tax in person or forfeit their property. In 1863 a tax of $92.07 was levied on the Lees' Arlington property. Mary Anna Lee sent a cousin to pay the tax, but federal tax commissioners refused to accept payment from him. The Arlington estate was purchased by the federal government in February 1864.<sup>6</sup>

Union brigadier general Montgomery C. Meigs, who had a great personal dislike for Robert E. Lee, turned the property into a military cemetery—partially to ensure that the Lees would not be able to return.<sup>7</sup> On 13 May 1864, William Christman was the first soldier buried there, a twenty-one-year-old private in the 67th Pennsylvania Infantry Regiment who died of peritonitis and never saw combat. Over a decade after the Civil War, the Lees' oldest son, George Washington Custis, successfully sued the federal government to return the property. He then sold it back to the federal government in 1883 for $150,000.<sup>8</sup>

Memorial Day, originally called Decoration Day when it was conceived by the Grand Army of the Republic (an influential fraternal organization for Union Civil War veterans), was first celebrated at Arlington National Cemetery on 30 May 1868. The day was “designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion [the Civil War].”<sup>9</sup> Today, service members and other volunteers place flags at every burial site in the entire cemetery every Memorial Day.

Arlington National Cemetery is 624 acres of rolling hills, grass, and gardens—approximately half of Robert and Mary Anna Lee’s original Arlington estate. In the first sixty years of its existence, there were just over thirty thousand interments.<sup>10</sup> Today, the cemetery averages between twenty-seven and thirty funeral services every weekday and between six and eight services on Saturdays throughout the year.<sup>11</sup> Arlington National Cemetery is divided into eighty-five consecutively numbered sections. Some of the higher numbered sections are still vacant. There is no more land available for the cemetery to easily increase in size, and there is concern that it will be filled in the next few decades if rules regarding interments are not modified.<sup>12</sup>

ARLINGTON GRAVE MARKER EMBLEMS

Following World War I, a board of officers—which included the secretary of war and the army’s chief of staff, General John J. Pershing—“adopted a new [headstone] design to be used for all graves except those of veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars.” The grave markers, known as “general” type, were to be “slightly rounded at the top, of American white marble, 42 inches long, 13 inches wide and four inches thick.” And, for the first time, a religious emblem was authorized for inclusion on the general-type headstones. Only two emblems were authorized at that time—“the Latin Cross for the Christian faith and the Star of David for the Jewish faith.”<sup>13</sup>

The federal government provides marble grave and columbarium markers for every veteran interred at Arlington National Cemetery. At the top of the marble marker is room for an emblem to be carved above the name of the deceased. The Department of Veterans Affairs and the National Cemetery Administration have currently authorized seventy emblems. In order to be approved, each design must represent “the sincerely held belief of the decedent that constituted a religion or the functional equivalent of religion and was believed and/or accepted as true by that individual during his or her life. The belief represented by an emblem need not be associated with or endorsed by a group or organization. Emblems of belief for inscription on Government headstones and markers do not include social, cultural, ethnic, civic, fraternal, trade, commercial, political, professional or military emblems.”<sup>14</sup>

The most common grave marker emblem at Arlington is the simple Christian (Latin) cross. Emblems are included for several Christian denominations: Lutheran, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Unitarian, Methodist, Seventh-day Adventist, Catholic, Church of God, the Polish National Catholic Church, and the Community of Christ. Other approved emblems denote the Jewish, Buddhist, Muslim, Hindu, Sufi, Bahá’í, Sikh, and Shinto faiths. There are also emblems for atheism, humanism, Wicca, Druidism, Eckankar, and Farohar as well as some nondenominational emblems such as a guardian angel, a heart, a pomegranate, a Maltese Cross, a medicine wheel, an eagle, a crane, and an infinity sign.<sup>15</sup> No other graphics or symbols are authorized on the government-furnished markers except the Civil War Union Shield, the Civil War Confederate Southern Cross of Honor, and the Medal of Honor insignia.<sup>16</sup>

Until 1980, Latter-day Saints had no distinctive emblem to clearly identify Church affiliation of the deceased. Donald L. Wardle, a Latter-day Saint director of Monument Services for the Department of Veterans Affairs, “noticed the lack of an LDS grave marker emblem in his position at the V.A. and began corresponding with Church leaders about it. They agreed the Church should have one. Several designs were considered but most were too intricate for headstone in[s]cription. Finally, [an] angel Moroni design was submitted, and it met all requirements.” The First Presidency approved the design, which “profiles the Angel Moroni blowing his trumpet. The bell end extends upward through an oval-shaped border.” The angel Moroni design was accepted by Veterans Affairs soon after.<sup>17</sup>

IDENTIFYING LATTER-DAY SAINTS

A project to identify members of the Church interred at Arlington was conceived several years ago. After learning from the cemetery historian’s office that no public records regarding religious affiliation or headstone emblems exist, the challenge to identify Latter-day Saints became more daunting. After visually inspecting tens of thousands of individual grave markers and markers in the cemetery's ten columbaria for the angel Moroni emblem, seventy-two Latter-day Saint interments had been identified.<sup>18</sup> A research team of Brigham Young University undergraduate students systematically checked 1980-and-later grave markers in all the remaining sections of the cemetery using an online database of grave marker photos.<sup>19</sup>

The research team identified 262 interments at Arlington National Cemetery with the angel Moroni emblem or who have been confirmed as members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—172 military service members (70 U.S. Army, 45 U.S. Navy, 40 U.S. Air Force, 16 U.S. Marine Corps, and 1 U.S.

Coast Guard), 72 military spouses, and 18 dependent children (see table 1). There is an almost equal number of officers and enlisted service members. Latter-day Saints are buried in thirty-three sections of the cemetery and nine sections of the columbaria. Section 60 has the most Latter-day Saint interments, with forty-three burials. Five sections have between twelve and nineteen Latter-day Saint graves, and the remaining twenty-seven sections have fewer than ten burials each.

Arlington National Cemetery grave markers include information regarding which wars the military members served in. Fifty-six of the Latter-day Saint veterans had no wartime service listed on their headstones. Sixty-seven served in one war, thirty-three served in two wars, and sixteen served in three wars (see tables 2 and 3).

For several years near the end of the twentieth century, individuals and families could provide their own headstones at Arlington in place of the white marble markers that are mandatory today. Some of those personalized grave markers include the angel Moroni emblem. The grave marker for Sergeant Major Richard Brown Wilson and his wife, Elizabeth Jeanne Marceau Wilson, for example, includes the phrase “Sealed in the Swiss Temple for Time and all Eternity” beneath their names. The marker for Colonel Ross Lee Carson and his wife, June Elizabeth Lydamore, includes Doctrine and Covenants 132:46: “Whatsoever you seal on earth shall be sealed in heaven; and whatsoever you bind on earth, in my name and by my word, saith the Lord, it shall be eternally bound in the heavens.”<sup>20</sup>

LATTER-DAY SAINTS BURIED AT ARLINGTON

Each Latter-day Saint interred at Arlington National Cemetery has a unique story. What follows is one of the many possible stories that could be told. Private First-Class Lloyd P. Shipley, from Cache County, Utah, was deferred from the 1940 draft because he lost most of two fingers on his right hand in a lawn mower accident as a six-year-old. After Pearl Harbor was attacked, he was reclassified and drafted. His military service began on 11 February 1942, and he served honorably for the next three years, two months, and eleven days. A farmer before the war, he was trained as a rifleman and served in Europe as a communications messenger in the 137th Infantry Regiment of the 35th Division. Seriously wounded by machine gun fire during the Normandy Campaign seven weeks after D-Day, he was hospitalized for the next nine months. He received a Purple Heart and earned a Combat Infantry Badge.<sup>21</sup> Of his service in France, he wrote, “It took about half a day in France to cool our ardor for the war. It was just like maneuvers, but the enemy was shooting back with real bullets and some of us were being killed. . . . It was a trying experience, but I wouldn't trade it for anything. It gives you the best opportunity to see men at their worst and to see the best come out in them under the worst circumstances."<sup>22</sup> He passed away in 1999. On the hundredth anniversary of his birth—17 December 2018—he was reinterred with his wife at Arlington National Cemetery with all his living grandchildren in attendance to witness the event.<sup>23</sup>

SUMMARY

Arlington National Cemetery has reached 80 percent of its capacity. There are only a hundred thousand burial sites left. To extend how long the cemetery "can be used as the final resting place for American service members," federal officials are "moving to limit the number of individuals eligible for burial at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia, restricting below-ground sites to combat heroes, battle casualties and a small pool of notable dignitaries.”<sup>24</sup> In the future, Latter-day Saints buried in Arlington National Cemetery will most likely be buried without any accompanying family members.

In the nineteenth century, Theodore O’Hara, a Kentucky veteran of the Mexican War, penned an elegiac poem entitled “Bivouac of the Dead.” The quatrain that ends the first stanza appears on the large and imposing McClellan Gate in the center of Arlington National Cemetery:

On Fame’s eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.<sup>25</sup>

Due to the incompleteness of available burial records, we may never know how many Latter-day Saints are buried in Arlington National Cemetery. This research is an initial effort to identify and honor them and their service to our nation.

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY

LATTER-DAY SAINT INTERMENTS

The following list is not complete (no burial database listing religious preferences is currently available for review, and a Latter-day Saint grave marker image was not available until 1980). Additional details about these people are available through the free ANC Explorer app, the ANC Explorer website (<https://ancexplorer.army.mil>), and FamilySearch.org.

Table explanatory notes:

1. STATUS entries are: “USA” (U.S. Army), “USAF” (U.S. Air Force), “USCG” (U.S. Coast Guard), “USMC” (U.S. Marine Corps), “USN” (U.S. Navy), “Spouse,” or “Dep” (which denotes a service member’s legal guardianship, usually for a child).
2. RANK abbreviations vary by both military service (for example, Captain is “CPT” in the U.S. Army and “CAPT” in the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Navy) and time period. Military rank definitions are available at <https://www.cem.va.gov/cem/hmm/abbreviations.asp>.
3. WARTIME SERVICE abbreviations are: “WWII” (World War II), “KOR” (Korea), “VN” (Vietnam), “GW” (Gulf War), “AFG” (Afghanistan), and “IRQ” (Iraq). A dash denotes no wartime service is recorded on the grave or columbarium marker.
4. ANC LOCATION information is either “S##-####” (Section number – Grave number), “C#-##-##-#” (Columbarium Court number – Section number – Column number – Niche number), or “CN#-##-##-#” (Columbarium Niche Wall number – Section number – Column number – Niche number).
