ADDRESS.

As this No. commences the Latter Day Saints' Messenger and Advocate, it is necessary for us to make a few remarks, and also inform our friends of the course which will be pursued in its Editorial department.

The closing Vol. of the Star, or the ten last numbers were published at this place; and for the matter which they contain, or at least, the Editorials, we are responsible. If the principles are pure, the men who embrace them may be guided in the way of righteousness; but if not, and we have not warned our fellow-men of the things of the kingdom of God, or have caused peace and safety, when destruction was near, then at the great day of retribution before an impartial Judge, we must answer for the blood of souls! Of these things, no man is more sensible than ourselves. But the reflection is otherwise. To be sure, our opponents have cried an alarm, and used every exaction to hinder the spread of truth; but truth has continued its steady course; and the work of the Lord has rolled out and where darkness once held unbounded sway, and corruption prevailed undisturbed, the fruit of righteousness has sprung up and the children of men been taught to rejoice with a joy unsearchable.

That this may continue to be the case we shall continue our exertions. We are aware that the work has just commenced; four years have been insufficient to warn all nations; this, an ancient day was a work of many years. And though the word has been preached to thousands, and many obeyed, yet many millions are yet in ignorance; yes, many in darkness. The only marvel is, that God should have mercy on a corrupt generation, and condescend to bring light and truth to light for their salvation. It is no marvel that men should reject it; this was always the case, because their deeds were evil.

Men labor for different objects, with a view to accomplish different purposes—some ambition, some pride, some money, and some power—but the few to save men. Only the few then have we had cause to repent, would show themselves friendly to the truth; only the few labor for that reward which is to be brought at the resurrection of Jesus Christ; and of course, from them only could we expect continuance in the arduous undertaking to instruct men in those things which are to concern them hereafter.

In matters of controversy, as we said in the first No. of the Star published in this place, we say now. The saints anciently were exhorted to contend earnestly for that faith once delivered to those before them; but nothing is thus said of controversy. It may be doubted by some, whether controversy upon any principle be correct, or ever resulted in good; but as in so many, but above all things, if men must contend upon religious matters, the greatest decorum and propriety ought to be observed! A heated zeal without knowledge may hurl thousands into a vortex irretrievable, and lay a foundation for future generations, the end of which may bring destruction and death!

With these reflections, then, we cannot but deem it unsafe for men to enter the field of controversy against their opponents in principle, except they are assured of the correctness of their own systems; this would be dangerous, and to avoid the evil arising from such an order of things, we shall not attempt.
